fore he was discovered.

The Chicago and All-America ball-teams have arrived in New York, after their trip around the world. They were banqueted at Delmonico's Monday evening of last week. Mark Twain, Channeey M. Depew and Mayor Chapin of Brooklyn were among the orators of the evening. In the course of his speech, Mr. Depew told of a conversation he had last summer with Mr. Gladstone concerning the newspapers of England and the United States. Mr. Gladstone asked what difference there was between them, and Mr. Depew had replied that the difference was simply this: "The English newspapers give ten columns to parliamentary debates and half a column to cricket, while the papers in this country give half a while the papers in this country give half a column to congressional news and ten columns to base-ball."

To My FRIENDS .- As you are well aware that I would not recommend that which I did not believe to be good, I desire to say to all who need a good, reliable, family medicine, that I believe one bottle of Sulphur Bitters will do you more good than any other remedy I ever saw.—Rev. Cephas Soule.

all the readers of the magazines) and Miss Rives (that was, now Mrs. Chanler), who has contributed some very dainty bits of verse. And they ought to be dainty, for Miss Rives herself is—I was about to say strikingly pretty, but perhaps she wouldn't like the word, and when you think of it "pretty" is not much of a word. She is tall and fair and graceful, and has a profusion of light curly hair which she wears simply knotted at the back of a well-poised head. She reminds one of her poems, and her poems suggest herself. But neither the one nor the other suggests the more recent astenishing development of the penny-dreadful order in the "Quick or the Dead."

As for Mr. Stockton, he has perhaps done his most characteristic work for the St. Nicholas—work showing, as his longer stories do not, the full strength of his peculiar and whimsical genius. Mr. Stockton has been, perhaps, sufficiently described. He is known, having been quite a lion of late, as dark and thin, lame, and rather sad and patient-looking; not an aggressive talker, animated enough when started, but prone to something more than the dashes of silence of which a man (whom they irrevently call Tom Macanlay) was once accused, rather unjustly. But however silent, there is nothing of the stage-villain, tragic, manof-genius air about him. He bows and smiles to his friends and acquaintances in a hearty fashion, wears well-fitting clothes, is fond of a glossy hat, and altogther has the well-kept air of a prosperous author. The ruthless desertion of two unprotected women on an island is more than would be suspected from one of his inoffensive appearance. It is something for time and a closer acquaintance to explain.

And Dr. Eggleston: what has he written which is better known than "The Hossie." "Every Epileptic sufferer ought to try Samaritan Nervine at once," says Rev. J. T. Etter, of New Glarus, Wis. "It's a never-failing remedy." Your druggist keeps suspected from one of his inoffensive appearance. It is something for time and a closer acquaintance to explain.

And Dr. Eggleston! what has he written which is better known than "The Hoosier School-boy?" At any rate, of that story every reader of St. Nicholas has a lively recollection. They have also a considerable admiration for what they doubtless would agree in calling the sound manliness of him who wrote it. I dare say a good many people have a very good idea of his appearance. The natural itiness of things would suggest it; at any rate, he looks entirely fit to be the author of such a story. He is a tall, vigorous-looking man, whose massive head is closely covered with iron-gray hair; his keen gray eyes are shadowed by heavy brows, and he wears a full beard. He walks like a strong man and an honest man and a man not tired of life—a man able to write "Hoosier School-master," able quite to be a Hoosier School-master, able quite to be a Hoosier School-master; to the best sort, a School-master with a big S, just as the printer has it here, if you please. To the admirers of the doctor it is a matter sometimes of regret that he should attempt the larger flight of a full-grown novel, for which he seems to lack the constructive ability. "AFTER a varied experience with many so-called cathartic remedies, I am convinced that Ayer's Pills give the most satisfactory results. I rely exclusively on these pills for the cure of liver and stomach com-plaints."—John B. Bell, Sr., Abilene, Texas.

And the same might be said of Mr. Stockton, whose longer stories want the distinctive charm of his shorter sketches—sketches like that in the last Christmas number of the St. Nicholas. While in good part employed with the natural as much as the most "real" work of the realists, they yet somehow contrive to transcend the just bounds of the grotesque bounds within which some of his smaller pieces lie with great niceness. Mr. Stockton, write us more of the little things.

The premier of Quebec has informed the government that the treasury is absolutely empty. Parliament having refused to indorse the Protestant proposal to disallow the Jesuits' estates act, it will be necessary to procure $400.00 to be handed over, under that measure, to the Jesuits and other Roman Catholic bodies in the province, and placed at the disposal of the pope. In the depleted state of the treasury the premier proposed to raise the money by public loan. This requires an act of the legislature, and the act must be signed by the lieutenant-governor, who has the veto power. It is stated that the lieutenant-governor will veto this bill and has so advised the premier. This decision has given rise to a complicated situation and developments are eagerly awaited.
